Conference to Instruct Leaders on Solution of Questions Begins at Fordham.

Fordham University. It is the second meeting to be held to instruct Catholic leaders in social service, to the end that they may inform Catholics upon the teachings of their Church. The present social unrest, progressive movements in politics, and especially the Socialist party, are to be met if possible with principles of sociology as laid down by the Church.

Fifty such leaders were present yesterday, fully half of them laymen, and about twenty more leaders are expected to-day. They come from lew York, Pennsylvania. West Virginia and New England, and are not only Catholic priests who are working on social lines, but leaders in labor organizations, professors in colleges and laymen who are employers of labor. Most of them are entertained in the dormitories of the university. The conference opened yesterday morning with ligh mass said by the Rev. John Nagleisen of St. Nicholas Church, this city, in the university chapel.

But it was evident that the description of his appearance had annoyed him greatly.

"They are about as consistent as Jack Rose's stories, these newspapers." he said. I have here allowing for the fact that I am not quite used to being shu up this way." and he smiled again.

Lieut. Becker carefully avoided any reference to his case and when asked questions concerning the charges against him or his probable defence replied with his invariable answer, "I have nothing to say," But he taiked on unimportant subjects and remarked that he had a lot of leisure to do things he had been wanting to do for years.

"I am reading a lot," he said. I have been able to study more these last few idays than for many a day back and I saily enjoy it."

"Oh, lots of things," he said with a grin principally—"but that is a secret which the leutenant did not want to appear. working on social lines, but leaders in labor organizations, professors in colleges and laymen who are employers of labor. The stage setting for the new Salome was unusually pleasing, but not nearly so elaborate as that used by Gertrude Hoffmann her costume was more modest than that worn by some of her predecessors, and the incident of grovelling about the head of John the Baptist was eliminated. There was nothing unusual about Miss Overton's dancing. The audience, which had apparently expected something startling, was visibly disappointed.

Hammerstein's, like some of the other theotres, has not had an orchestra for several weeks, but there was a special one yesterday for Salome. It was conducted by creatore. Rev. Father H. J. The lecture in the afternoon was by Prof. Ryan of St. Paul and following it there was a prolonged discussion. He said that there is impending a social revolution, which is unrest in a severe form, is shown on all sides. Even the political parties, Republican, Democratic and all, are affected by it. Prof. Ryan outlined at length conditions obtaining in the later Middle Ages, when, he said, the Catholic Church was in control of affairs as she had not been before and has not been since.

As I ather Mackel, a German, outlined in the morning some social lessons imparted by Germany, Or. Ryan, of Irish descent, gave in the afternoon the social lessons to be had from England. Together they presented the lessons of practically all Europe from the thirteenth century down as affecting labor and social affairs in America. In the early part of the eighteenth century, Dr. Ryan said, there began to be industrial alarm when one man became the employer of so many as 150 men. He traced most of the difficulties arising in England and from England in America up to the last thirty years to the refusal of Parliament to pass an act flying a minimum wage for working people.

This mistake he declared to have been fatal and to have remained so through many generations. At last England got

Pr. Ryan concluded with a plea for social justice and was almost at once the target of many questions not hostile, but such as showed the wide interest on the part of his hearers. The lectures to be given today are in the nature of institutes and deal with the divine law governing social problems and the labor movements in the United States. The conference continues throughout the week.

What He's Rending Up On Is a Secret—Resents "Haggard" Stories.

Lieut, Charles Becker stuck to his policy of silence on any subject pertinent to his case yesterday when he was seen in the Tombs by a Sun reporter. I wish they would stop saying that I looked worn and haggard from worry." he said. "Do I look that way?"

There was considerable annoyance in his ever ready smile. The lieutenant surely did not look worn. His face has kept its coat of tan, through which the flush of health shows red. His teeth were fastened on a cigar which he smoked with A conference of Catholic leaders in evident enjoyment. Several Republicans Who Favored Measure Last Year Now Against It.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—The second of four tariff bills that have been in conference committee of the two houses was by the Senate to-day and will go to the President. The first measure was a bill revising the metal schedule, which was agreed to Saturday.

The second is the bill revising the woolen schedule, which passed the Senate to-day by a vote of 35 to 28. The House agreed to the bill Saturday and it will now go to the President, where it will undoubtedly meet a veto, and that will be the end of it for the present.

The bill agreed to to-day was the compromise measure reported from the conerence committee of the two houses and is the same bill that Congress passed and sent to the President a year ago and which he vetoed. There is no reason to believe that anything has occurred to which he vetoed. There is no reason to believe that anything has occurred to change the President's attitude toward the measure. Senator La Foliette admitted to-day that the compromise bill did not follow the recommendations of the Tariff Board.

A number of Republican Senators who voted for the bill a year ago voted against it to-day. Among these were Senators Borah and Bourne, Progressive Republicans, and Senator Nelson of Minnesota, a near Progressive. Senator Cummins was paired in opposition to the bill. It was passed by the votes of Democrats, every Democratic Senator voting for it and the following Progressive Republicans: Bristow, Clapp, Gronna, La Follette, Works and Crawford. Senator Poindexter of Washington was paired in favor of it.

Senator Cummins made a brief speech in which he declared he was convinced that the duties proposed in the compromise bill were below the standard at which protection would be afforded to American industries and were below the duties recommended by the tariff board report on the wool schedule.

Senator Nelson spoke in like vein and also condemned the measure which carries ad valorem rather than specific duties. The bill provides for 29 per cent. ad valorem on raw wool and corresponding reductions on manufactures of wool.
